In Celebration on Women's Golf Day upcoming on Tuesday, June 4, the California Golf Course Owners Association, Nevada Golf Course Owners Association, and NGCOA Arizona will profile a series of inspirational women with deep roots in golf.

The number Five appears to be Christina Ricci's lucky number! It only took five lessons for Christina to get hooked on the game of golf. Five years later, she was a "handicap" and author of her very first book A Girl's On-Course Survival Guide to Golf. This book addresses every detail of a woman's golf game, from the tee to the green and everything in-between. Christina wrote the book to help those visual-learners like herself have a better understanding of how the game of golf is played. When she was first learning to play, the instructional books that were available were both text heavy and lacking in pictures, two aspects that did not assist with teaching golf. These books were also not ideal for bringing out on the course while playing. She didn't know it at the time, but writing her book filled a gap for assisting women in learning a fun and easy way to play and understand the sport. Her book is portable too! The guide is dedicated to Christina's mother who was also the inspiration for writing the book.

Christina feels that Women's Golf Day is a great opportunity to try out the game. She encourages women to explore group clinics that are tailored for brand new players as group settings are far less intimidating.

Christina is always working on her game and believes that her passion for improvement helps translate to coaching, where she gets excited to see players improving and making more pars. When Christina isn't golfing or working on her next book (More Pars Power), you can find her playing tennis, riding her bike, or doing Crossfit as a Level 2 certified trainer. Christina is on the cusp of entering the PGA program and is excited to be a PGA member.
